Clarity's Beneficial Qualities and Activities The Core of Real Relationship

Part 1

Your very own clarity is naturally endowed with powerful qualities and activities. Clarity is the basis and foundation for a totally fulfilling life. Clarity is the very potent, extremely skilled identity that contains all knowledge with nothing left out.

In the first moment of clarity, we recognize its tremendous stability, its tremendous potential. We realize we have found our true identity. This realization becomes increasingly vivid.

Clarity is necessary as it provides a completely stable foundation for each moment of everyday life and the capacity to proceed with tremendous power and force. Clarity requires 100% commitment and being willing to go to any lengths.

Clarity does not deal with superficial aspects of identity but with its innate potency, its actual ability to create radical change.

Short moments of clarity are necessary so that we can begin to understand what clarity is all about. In brief moments of uncontrived clarity, we begin to see that clarity is the basis of all of our thoughts, seamlessly blended with points of view. We instinctively recognize the impossibility of separating clarity's view out from ordinary points of view in order to achieve some kind of special state.

Identity and relationship based on points of view always work through name tags in a process of judging this against that. Relying on points of view literally divides everything up and depletes our energy instead of unifying it in the mutual force of clarity.

We really need to see very clearly the disadvantages of maintaining our points of view about identity and relationship. Then we need to extract the power from points of view by relying on their clarity.

By relying on short moments of clarity, we see the real power of clarity. With the very real power of each moment of clarity, we empower ourselves like an ocean gathers all of its force from single drops of water.

Short moments of clarity also allow us to train into a mass of human power the likes of which are unimaginable. Short moments of clarity are very powerful, very radical and very direct. Precise clarity, moment to moment, changes human society forever.

In short moments of clarity, we begin to relate clarity's actual power and purpose to our ordinary everyday life. We recognize that clarity has always been the infrastructure of our entire life. Even though we did not learn about clarity in the past, it has been present and totally powerful all along.

Within our very own clarity, we discover that we already have certain qualities. Clarity is self-affirming. It provides the qualities of relief and power immediately in our own direct experience. This is very convincing, very authoritative. We begin to see that clarity's relief and power are reliable and consistent. We can count on clarity without fail.

This process is very natural. In clarity, all of our ups and downs become a single power. Clarity's qualities and activities are obvious from the first moment—total relief and total unending power. In clarity, we cannot reject our real empowered identity and try to be something else.

Clarity is the only potential we have, and when we instinctively recognize this, we see that we can use clarity powerfully and beneficially in each aspect of living daily life.

Clarity is extraordinarily special, and extremely real and personal. Clarity seals the powerful bond of human society in mutuality and potency. This is real relationship and we see it clearly and directly.

Clarity instantaneously shows how to relate to our own ordinary existence or daily situation as well as to our societal goals. In clarity we relate with the details of our everyday life according to our own particular makeup. It is a real and personal experience. And in order to relate to our lives in a clear fashion, there are certain fruits of clarity we have to understand. These qualities and activities have a working vocabulary of potency and prosperity. We become fluent in this potent, prosperous vocabulary of body, speech and mind. We are introduced to our basic identity and begin to be able to completely rely on ourselves, perhaps for the first time.

Clarity extends in the same way that space extends our sense of ourselves. The openness of clarity expands our definition of identity into a powerful expanse. Clarity is everyone's fundamental style, intrinsic perspective or stance, and way of perceiving the world and working with it. Clarity is our most potent and prosperous intelligence.

Clarity means conciseness and indestructibility are built in. Clarity thoroughly cuts the root of reactive mental and emotional tendencies; clarity also represents the open awareness of many possible perspectives. Clarity corrects or remedies any distortion in a precise and sharp way. Clarity is the view pervading all points of view and sees them clearly.

Clarity is penetrating and very personal and very relational. Intellectually, clarity is very vivid and lucid. Clarity knows how to evaluate logically the arguments that are used to explain experience. It can tell whether logic is true or false. It has a sense of constant openness and perspective. For instance, clarity is like a flawless crystal ball viewing all of its reflections from hundreds of perspectives, according to where it was placed, the way it was perceived, the distance from which it was looking at it, and so forth.

The intellect of clarity is not just encyclopedic; it is concise, direct, and aware of perspectives from within the perspective itself. Clarity takes all perspectives and clearly sees all their aspects. Such indestructibility, conciseness and intimacy with everything is very personal and very real. This is true relationship.

Through the power of clarity, human society has an indestructible relationship, potency and skillfulness that have never existed before. We are able to enjoy this power and skill right now, together.
