

A Beneficial Society

In every single form of media is just a complete confirmation of open intelligence and natural perfection. That's really what's going on here, because we already know that this is who we are. We already know that this is our fundamental nature, that this is the new order of intelligence that we all have and that we all are so incredibly powerful. We're interested in accessing those powerful qualities. We're interested in accessing them to be of complete benefit in our own lives, really accessing the core competency of mental and emotional stability, of keen insight, skillful means, the power to fulfill creative intent, compassion. These are all just simply human qualities. We can really see that we are recognizing this for ourselves in our own experience and are able to simply demonstrate this in everyday life—in our work situations, in our family situations, as parents, as friends. It's so accessible; it really is.

We have the choice to emphasize our data streams, or we have the choice to rely on open intelligence. Here in the Balanced View we have the complete support to live a lifestyle of the Four Mainstays and really know what it's like to support ourselves and be of support to others in complete unity and connection. That's what everybody really is interested in; we're all interested in accessing that. Then when we approach relationships in life, the relationships are really about being of benefit, of service, of openness, of love, instead of needing and wanting and desiring. All of those may come up, but it's not what we need to focus on. This is such a great way to contribute to each other, it really is.

www.balancedview.com

Again, it's completely accessible: short moments, repeated many times. Stop thinking for a moment and right there, this alertness, cognizance, clarity, accessible any time and more and more obvious and continuous. It is something that never comes or goes and is completely stable. We've been looking for stability in all of the data streams, looking for the answers in all of the data streams, relying on our sense of knowledge in just the descriptions and labels in the data stream, but open intelligence is the one thing we can totally count on in our life.

We can really allow ourselves the most compassionate means of intelligence and support. It's so natural, it really is; it's so incredibly natural, so potent and powerful. The society that comes about when each of us takes this up in our own experience is the society that really is going to be a long-lasting, beneficial, powerful, potent society. We've already tried so many different ways to manage the data stream in our own experience and as a collective, and we really have found that this just isn't working. We've tried everything! I mean we've tried everything here, and we've also tried everything as a world population. Even if there have been temporary solutions or temporary relief, nothing really has brought us lasting solutions and lasting benefit.

So, it's really incredible to be able to access what does truly work, what is most supportive, what is most sustainable; we come to find this new order of intelligence. It's new to us usually because we haven't been relying on it. But we come to find out that it really does provide all that's needed and has always been present.

It is up to each one of us; it really is up to each one of us as we take this up in our own experience and come together as communities all over the world. Then we're able to make great, great changes in accessing what's already there, really accessing the knowledge to proceed in ways that are totally skillful, that we don't have to just effort for or try to come up with in some kind of hard and difficult way. We can really rely on open intelligence to proceed in the most masterful ways, and we see that we all are incredible masters of our data stream. We are no longer victims of all of these thoughts, emotions and experiences, but truly able to extract the power from all that arises in such a potent way.

As we gain clarity assurance, we are able to share this with others. The Balanced View organization is built on a vision of passing this on to each other. It's not like one person has all of this knowledge and the rest of us just could hope that we may receive some of it. It really is a vision based on and confidence in each one of us as human beings who are able to access this power and are able to proceed in ways that really contribute to ourselves and everyone. We simply know this; we all know this. It just becomes more and more obvious to us. That's just the beauty of it and the ease of it. Truly. And what a relief! What an incredible relief to just not have to live a lifestyle of managing, of rearranging, of avoiding whatever's coming up, to live a lifestyle now of what is so natural, our core competency, our most natural way of operating that is completely accessible in each moment. Short moments obviously support us in that, as well as all of the other Mainstays.

www.balancedview.com

It's amazing how powerful we are as human beings and that there's no one left out from that, absolutely no one, and that we all have these incredible gifts, strengths and talents to contribute—each in our own unique way—and that clarity assurance, open intelligence assurance allows us to demonstrate those, to access those, to see those and contribute, contribute, contribute. We support and empower each other fully in relationship, instead of disempowering each other. It really is a new order of intelligence. Even though it's naturally present and always has been, it's amazing how we've missed that.

Now we really have an opportunity here, a choice with the introduction to open intelligence and then the confidence gained and complete assurance, all with the support of the Four Mainstays, to never have to go it alone—never ever, not for a moment. There is 24/7 support, and what is that support? Again, that's just the confirmation of our natural perfection of the natural perfection of open intelligence. It's amazing how in the past some of us may have looked to others for our power or looked to others to get the job done or looked to others to be the special one or the leader, and how we now find the most powerful leadership within ourselves. We all contribute that together, taking full responsibility for those innate powers that we have as human beings in complete support of each other through a lifestyle of the Four Mainstays.

The Four Mainstays are such a demonstration of open intelligence, really the platform of open intelligence—that understanding of mind. Short moments of open intelligence are the complete understanding of mind. But that's not the only thing; there's not a hierarchy here. It's also the complete devotion; devotion to the trainer, which is just a symbol of devotion to open intelligence, to complete benefit. There's all of the media, the incredible expression of brilliant speech, then the community—the collective—reminding us that we really aren't alone here, that we are in this together, that there is complete unification within open intelligence, and that there aren't eight billion open intelligences! It's open intelligence, the vast expanse, and that is who we all are fundamentally, and from that open intelligence we bring forth our individual gifts, strengths, and talents to contribute.